

Angels and Money

Many people think the idea that an angel could be involved with such a very human subject as “money” is preposterous. At one time I probably would have thought the same. Now having been in active service to the angelic realm for some years, I have learned not to jump to conclusions.

What are angels? Let me begin by stating what they are not. Angels are not actually anthropomorphic beings who dress in long robes, have wings, play a harp or a trumpet and cry tears over humanity’s disobedience to God. We like to visualize them that way, and there is certainly no problem with that. The visual images of these winged servants of God are written in the collective subconscious mind of humanity. Every major spiritual tradition on Earth has its own version of “angels.” We humans have needed to visualize in order to grasp the existence and nature of the intangible realms. We take aid and comfort from these images of winged celestial guardians. Thus the angels appear to us in our visions in ways that we expect to see them, so we will recognize them.

What are they really? They are intelligences whose purpose is to serve the Creation. We humans live in a free-will universe where we absolutely create our experience of reality through our thoughts and emotions. There are countless other races and species living in this free-will universe with which we share a collective experience of reality. Who orchestrates all this free-will co-creation so that it retains order and continuity and does not descend into chaos? When one or a group has a thought which is propelled with emotion toward manifestation, the angels respond, orchestrating the forces of the universe to bring it about.

The angels, existing outside of space-time, see and serve the greater unfolding of Creation in the minutest detail. They have information about the free will choices of the individual soul’s superconscious mind or “higher self.” This information is not available to the soul living inside the space-time continuum. The human brain is not structured to be able to process such a vast amount of information. Those angels who function as guides to humans and others in an embodied life expression send reminders and signs in various ways, to provide a compass for navigating experiences. They exist whether one believes in them or not.

The angelic intelligences are ordered into a hierarchy, from angels who serve very small portions of Creation to vast intelligences, the archangels, who oversee the proper unfolding of great portions of Creation. Metatron is sometimes known as the king or prince of angels, or the angel at the top of the Tree of Life, because is at the top of the angelic hierarchy. He, together with his counterpart Sandalphon, orchestrates, administers and serves the whole of free-will Creation. Angels do not have free will. They do not co-create of their own volition. This is no doubt how it should be. If some of them were to quit their jobs, we free will creators might have some problems.

Given the above, what do you suppose an angel might have to do with the subject of “money?” Humans are very obsessed with “money.” Most of the conscious creation and manifesting exercises that humans do are oriented towards wealth and prosperity. Those who believe in Deity pray to their chosen one for wealth and prosperity. It is clearly observable in our world that money = power. Those who have the most money rule the affairs of humans. Our world populace is essentially split into groups of those who “have” money and the power it buys, and those who “have not.” Those who “have” are fully focused on keeping their money and acquiring more of it. Those who “have not” live in disempowerment and dream of becoming one who “has.”

We cannot foist the responsibility for the way we live on God or some power outside of ourselves. We have co-created it over many generations of humans. With the invention of “money” as a medium of easier exchange, some people, I am sure, began immediately to contemplate how to use the new medium to their personal advantage. The angels assisted us in creating this way of living; they had no free will choice in the matter.

As it is in our world, many things come about because the majority of people simply do not know there is another way, or are afraid to break with tradition and initiate change. Breaking with tradition has, throughout our recorded history, proved itself to be a dangerous pursuit. It does not matter, though whether we create by commission or omission, from benevolence or malevolence, from ignorance or wisdom. The angels’ function is to deliver what we call forth, whether it serves our evolution or our destruction. That is the gift and also the responsibility of having free will. If the majority of humans are focusing their thoughts and emotions on “money” then the angels will respond.

How does humanity ever evolve, then? There are always “seeds of evolution” present on Earth, more highly evolved souls who dream, imagine and work to transcend base human nature and imprint higher ideals and goals into the collective consciousness. We are not forgotten or rejected by the Source of All. These “seeds of evolution” initiate change and often impact human consciousness for many generations beyond their lifetimes. They influence humans to think about and to desire higher ways of living, which the angels will then work to orchestrate. Since the angels do not have free will and cannot directly intervene in human affairs, they work with receptive humans to bring about certain results. Many seemingly miraculous occurrences are the result of human-angel cooperation.

In these times, at the end of the Mayan Calendar or the dawning of the Age of Aquarius, humanity’s attention has been very much focused on solutions to the world’s problems in many different areas. Human consciousness is being stimulated by increased gamma ray bursts emanating from the center of our Milky Way galaxy. As some say, it is the time of the “return to the Light.” World peace, prosperity and sustainability are desired by the vast majority of Earth’s populace. The faithful of many religions and spiritualities, both old and new age, have prayed and called forth the assistance of the Divine in this regard. The angels, of course, must respond to such an outpouring.

Whatever the specific cause or problem one is interested in solving, or profiting from, “money” is the key ingredient. “Money makes the world go ‘round.” Those who control it control the outcome of any situation. Those who do not have it or cannot raise it up some way are powerless. In truth, both the rich and the poor of our world are enslaved to the collective thought forms surrounding “money.” What the poor crave and cannot get the rich cannot bear the thought of losing. There are exceptions, of course. There are poor people who lead joyous and fulfilling lives and rich people who are very generous with their wealth. In a collective consciousness however, the balance of power lies with the thoughts and emotions of the majority.

With almost all humanity’s attention on “money,” it is in accord with the operating laws of our free will universe that the angels should respond to assist us in the calling forth of our freedom from slavery to the prevailing thought forms about money. Since, as stated above, angels cannot intervene directly in human affairs, they cannot help us with our “money” problems, or any other problems, for that matter, without human cooperation. I am one such person who partners with the angelic realm, in particular the Archangel Metatron. Our “money” problems have been heard at the very top of the angelic hierarchy. It is the angels’ job to help us manifest what we desire and call forth, even if it involves the subject of “money.” It is my job to facilitate that for the angelic realm, in particular the Archangel Metatron, here on Earth. All is according to universal law.
